

ENGLISH MAJOR (BA)

Department website (<https://www.uwp.edu/learn/programs/englishmajor.cfm>)

College: College of Arts & Humanities

Preparation for Graduate School

Students considering graduate study in English are urged to consult their advisors early in their programs. Their programs should include strong representation in the various historical periods and major authors of literature in English, as well as the various genres. Advisers may suggest additional reading to fill in gaps. If a course needed for graduate study preparation is not currently offered, it is occasionally possible to cover the same material through independent study (ENGL 499 Independent Study). To explore this possibility, students should consult their advisors.

Internships

Students who choose to pursue a certificate in professional writing and communication must complete a writing internship. Those majors and others interested in internships should see the department chair or those department members listed as teaching ENGL 494 Internship in Writing and Editing in the course schedule for further information.

Recommended Courses Outside of English

To obtain appropriate background information on the literary works and figures studied in English courses, students are advised to take some of their elective credits in the following courses: U.S. History 101 and 102; Western and European History 118, 119, and 120; Philosophy 101 and 102; Art History 125 and 126; and Humanities 101 and 102. For students in the Film and Cultural Studies Concentration, the Digital Media and Production Certificate would be a useful and valuable addition.

Program Learning Outcomes

1. Writing Goal: Students will become writers who know how to employ a wide range of strategies as they write and to use different writing process elements appropriately to communicate with different audiences for a variety of purposes.
2. Critical Reading and Analysis Goal: Students will become accomplished, active readers who value ambiguity and complexity, and who can demonstrate a wide range of strategies for understanding texts, including interpretations with an awareness of, attentiveness to, and curiosity toward other perspectives.
3. History and Theory Goal: Students will develop a comprehensive knowledge of the variety of texts in diverse time periods and in diverse locations, as well as know the critical and historical principles behind the construction of literary, linguistic, and cultural histories, in order to demonstrate an active participation in scholarship.
4. Research Goal: Students will be able to follow a research process from proposal, research, drafts, to final projects.
5. Collaborative Learning Goal: Students will learn that the ability to communicate their ideas to a larger audience is as important as having the ideas themselves, and that sharing and coordinating ideas sustains and develops the larger intellectual sphere, of which they are a part. Students will understand the connection between collaborative learning and their intended professional field(s), including but not limited to their future professional roles and responsibilities.

6. Learning Outcomes for Program Level Goals
7. Writing Goal:
8. Students can write texts informed by specific (as is appropriate for the discipline and course contexts) rhetorical strategies.
9. Students can write in several modes and for different audiences and purposes, with an awareness of the social implications and theoretical issues that these shifts raise.
10. Students can revise for content and edit for grammatical and stylistic clarity.
11. Critical Reading and Analysis Goal:
12. Students can apply a wide range of strategies to comprehend, evaluate, and interpret texts. These strategies may include, but are not limited to: drawing on their prior experience, their interactions with other readers and writers, reflection, intertextuality, their knowledge of word meaning and of other texts, their word identification strategies, and their understanding of textual features (e.g., sound-letter correspondence, sentence structure, syntax, context, graphics, images).
13. Students can evaluate the aesthetic and/or ethical value of texts.
14. Students will demonstrate an ability to recognize how formal elements of language and genre shape meaning. They will recognize how writers can transgress or subvert generic expectations, as well as fulfill them.
15. History and Theory Goal:
16. Students can demonstrate knowledge of the terminology of literary and/or cultural periods in order to be active participants in a variety of literary and/or cultural fields
17. Students can identify and employ theoretical approaches to literary and/or cultural study (including, but not limited to, film studies, linguistics, and professional and technical writing).
18. Students demonstrate an ability to read texts in relation to their historical and cultural contexts, in order to gain a richer understanding of both text and context, and to become more aware of themselves as situated historically and culturally.
19. Research Goal:
20. Students can identify and formulate questions for productive inquiry.
21. Students can evaluate sources for credibility, bias, quality of evidence, and quality of reasoning.
22. Students use citation methods and structures appropriate to their field of study.

Requirements for the English Major

Portfolio Requirement

At the end of their last semester, English majors must submit for approval a portfolio of written work that they have completed in English courses at UW-Parkside. Unapproved portfolios must be revised before a diploma can be received. For portfolio requirements, instructions, and models of portfolios that have shown mastery, please visit our website at: <http://www.uwp.edu/learn/departments/english/portfolio.cfm>.

The English major consists of courses in English and related disciplines beyond the required freshman composition sequence. Students are encouraged to consult with English Department faculty advisors before declaring their major and during its completion to fulfill their program of study most expediently and comfortably.
